Remember: write for your copy of the cumulative Index to the first fifty VWMs, just to see what Miscellany can add up to! Here are some of Laura Moss Gottlieb’s reflections on her process:

What a bitter-sweet pleasure it is to read through the Miscellany’s 24 years! Scholarly analyses of Woolf’s work have gradually come to dominate the initial awestruck accounts of trips to sites associated with Woolf, poems in her praise, and the breathless reporting of newly discovered locations of Woolf’s unpublished letters, diaries, and drafts. Yet concern about the sites associated with the Bloomsbury Group, fascination with the transformation of Woolf’s work into musical productions, dramatic readings, and films, discussion about her politics and influences, and exploration of her friendship networks persist throughout the years. And beneath the interest in Woolf runs the academic subtext like an underground river: the heyday of the “Lupines” along with the flourishing of the feminist movement; the fun at conferences and MLA parties; the contentiousness of various Woolf factions; the rise, flowering, and decline of academic careers; the enormous scholarly productivity in Woolf studies of which this Miscellany is an important element; and the loss to death of members of the Woolf community. Though not its main focus, the Index-like the Miscellany itself—demonstrates the ineluctable truth that “Time Passes” indeed!

P.S. Great news in just as we go to press—Laura Moss Gottlieb has just been given the H.W. Wilson Award by the American Society of Indexes! And just think, she got her start with VWM!
Please note the following: (1) There were two issues of the VWM numbered "12," though the number was hand-corrected on most copies. In this index, issue #12 refers to the Spring 1979 issue, while issue #13 refers to the Christmas 1979 issue. (2) There were two issues of the VWM numbered "33." In this index, issue #32 refers to the Spring 1989 issue, while issue #33 refers to the Fall 1989 issue. (3) Works by Virginia Woolf are indexed under the title, rather than the author. (4) Items and locations indexed under the heading "Manuscripts, Typecripts, Letters, and Diaries, Location of" include only those items and locations mentioned in the VWM. The list is not meant to be a complete guide to Woolf materials available in the libraries mentioned. (5) VW = Virginia Woolf; LW = Virginia Woolf; VWM = Virginia Woolf Miscellany; VWS = International Virginia Woolf Society.
